Conflicts of Interest: Citadel Securities, its affiliates or any of their respective employees may have an interest in financial instruments of, or related to, the type referred to in the investment recommendation giving rise to potential conflicts of interest between Citadel Securities and the client. Such conflicts of interest may include, but are not limited to (i) acting as a market maker; (ii) dealing in principal; (iii) holding a long or short position (including possibly a position inconsistent with the information in the recommendation), all of which may impact the performance of the financial (or related) instrument. Information included in the recommendation or referred to in the recommendation may have been acted upon by Citadel Securities, or its affiliates for its own purposes and has not been procured for the exclusive benefits of clients.

Citadel Securities has in place effective organization and administrative arrangements for the identification, mitigation, management and disclosure of conflicts of interests in respect to investment recommendations. Such arrangements are detailed in Citadel's Conflicts of Interest Policy and include;

- i. Internal policies, procedures, guidance and training for all employees on the identification of conflicts;
- ii. Escalation procedures to ensure conflicts are appropriately considered and mitigated;
- iii. Maintenance of information barriers to prevent the flow of confidential information;
- iv. Restrictions on personal account dealing and procedures and controls for wall crossings;

Remuneration: Citadel Securities have in place bona fide remuneration structures for sales and trading personnel responsible for the production and dissemination of investment recommendations.

Valuation and Methodology: The recommendation may be based on estimates using various valuation methods, including observing the market and underlying movements in particular instruments or issuers. Valuation methods are dependent upon proprietary models and the subjective opinion of the sales and trading representative carrying out the valuation. For further detail on our valuation methods, please contact your Citadel Securities representative.
